Jason Windows has been supplying quality products to the WA building industry for over fifty years. The company pioneered the introduction of aluminium windows and doors in WA in the early sixties and has continued to be the benchmark in product design, strength and service ever since.

Challenge.

Ineffective planning system for their "made to order" manufacturing environment.

Solution.

Netstock integrated with Pronto.

Result.

A 30% reduction in inventory levels, with an 8% increase in stock availability.

Daily replenishment recommendations

Netstock's daily replenishment recommendations for raw materials and components, and its highlighting of potential stock-outs, enabled an inventory reduction and improved stock availability.
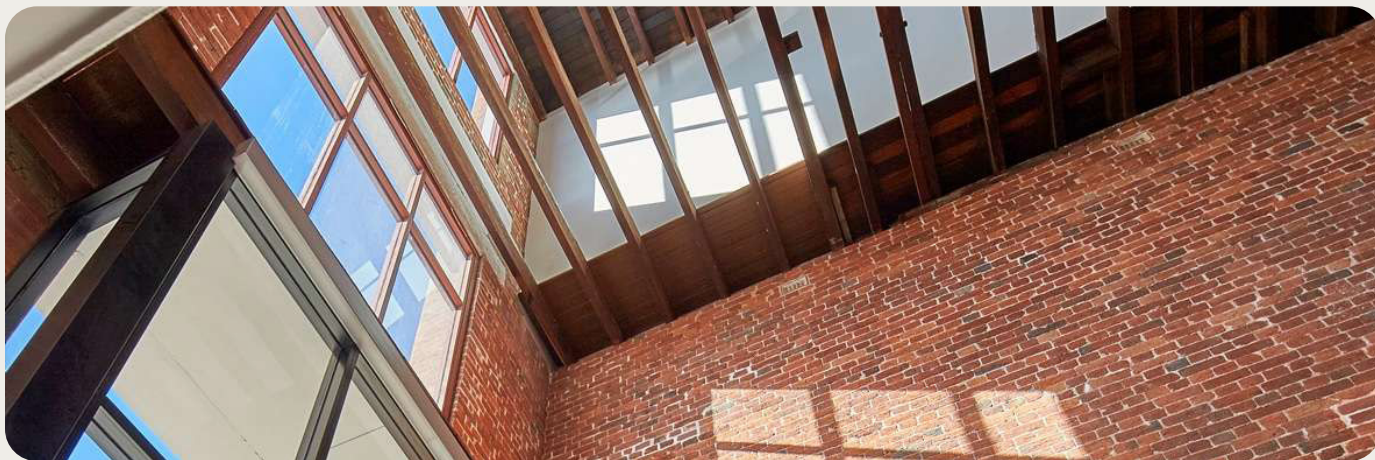

"The Netstock system provides us with the tools to manage by exception, with the easy to use dashboard allowing drill-through to more detail. The order facility provides us with visual order recommendations for review and these are converted into actual orders in our ERP. This process significantly reduced the time to compile an order and allowed the team time to focus on adding value and getting our inventory into better balance," says Ian Goddard, Service and Installation Director.

"In addition, the identification of dead and slow moving stock ensured that these products remained in focus until they were addressed."
